

Copper "dripper" can be used at ground level or on a pedestal bird bath.

Songbirds Love These Birdbath "Misters"

Moving water attracts more songbirds to bird baths and feeders, says the manufacturer of a line of "misters" and "drippers".

Here's what's available:

- Dripper - Copper dripper can be used at ground level or on pedestal bird baths. Birds like to perch on the dripper and drink directly from the end of the tube, the company says. Flow rates can be adjusted down to 1 pt. of water per hour. Can be hooked up to a permanent water line or garden hose. Sells for $51.70.

- Feather Mister - It's designed to spray a fine cloud of water that wets foliage so birds can take "leaf baths". You simply select a small tree or shrub, attach the nozzle to a low limb and hook up to water. Sells for $37.70.

- Dripper/Feather Mister Combination

- Can be set up as a dripper or an adjustable flow mister, or operated simultaneously as both. Sells for $60.50.

- Estate Cascade - A molded 2 by 3-ft. cascading bird bath and pond including a Hollow Waterfall Rock, a 140 gph pump, tubing, fittings and reservoir to recirculate cascading water through three levels. Installs anywhere in yard and sets up in 20 minutes. Sells for $184.70.

The company also sells several bird baths featuring drippers and various bird bath accessories.

Accurate Temperature Taken By Touching Forehead

You can get a consistently accurate temperature reading with this new-style thermometer that you simply stroke across the forehead.

Philips Electronics' "SensorTouch" thermometer features an infrared sensor that takes multiple readings as it's passed across the temporal artery, calculating body temperature. Readings are given on an LCD readout.

"It's so gentle it can be used on a sleeping baby. Clinically proven as accurate as a rectal thermometer, which is considered the 'gold standard' by experts," the company says.

Sells for between $70 and $90.

"Air Conditioned" Vest Helps You Keep Your Cool

No matter how hot the weather or working conditions, you can stay cool in this "air conditioned" vest that works by evaporation.

Gempler's "Mira-Cool" vest contains pockets of water-absorbing gel crystals. You activate the vest by submerging it in cool water for 30 minutes to allow the crystals to soak up water. After you put the vest on, evaporation from your skin keeps you cool for up to three hours on even the hottest, most humid day, according to the company.

The vest is made of a high visibility orange material. One size fits all.

Sells for $24.50.

Pop-Up Tape Dispenser Makes Gift Wrapping Easier

New Pop-Up tape strips from 3M let you wrap a gift in half the time.

The dispenser straps to the back of your hand. Strips of Scotch brand tape pop up one at a time like tissue paper out of a box. The dispenser is refillable with packs that'll wrap about 20 average size gifts.

Pop-Up tape strips are also available in a table top dispenser.

You can find the new dispenser at office supply stores, or go to 3M's web site (www.3m.com). You can also call 1-800 328-6276 in the U.S. and Canada for the store nearest you.
